Ruth Outpitches Walter Johnson in Opener, but Nationals Turn Tables Later-Smith Breaks Up Final Combat with Slashing Drive.

By WILLIAM PEET.

Those pennant-aspiring Boston Red Sox beat Walter Johnson, 2 to 1, in the opening game of yesterday's double-header, but then ran into a snag, and although fighting gamely, dropped the final frolic, 4 to 3.

Babe Ruth, the big southpaw, recognized as the best twirler in Bill Carrigan's stable, opposed Walter Johnson, and beat him, outpitching the Speed King, while his teammates played smart inside baseball, making victory possible by employing a time-worn base path play, and getting away with it.

The second game was a rip snorter, one of those see-saw affairs, with first one team leading and then the other. Elmer Smith broke up this combat with a long-distance clout to center field in the tenth inning, two hands being down at the time and a runner on second base.

The largest Saturday erowd of the season turned out, and the fans were with the ball players every minute, uncorking plenty of old-fashioned rooting.

The score existing tie and sending everybody home was 3 tel.

Babe Ruth was just about invincible. You've simply got to hand it to him. His speed was terrific and his control good enough to win any old kind of a game. For some unknown reason the Red Sox have hit Johnson hard in every game he has pitched against them this season. It was the same vesterday.

Boston tied the score in the third in the most approved manner, doubles by Thomas and Janvin turning the trick.

Johnson tightened up and permitted no liberties until the sixth, when the winning marker splashed over. Hooper opened the inning with a clean single to center, taking second on a wild pitch and pulling up at third when Hobby scratched a single through McBride. Then followed an attempted double steal, Hobby drawing a throw from Johnson by his daring lead off first base and while McBride and Judge were running Hobby to earth, or before Hobby could be tagged out, Hooper was over the plate.

Elmer Smith Responsible in a Large Degree for Victory Over Red Sox—Gossip.

Washington fans are just beginning to appreciate the efforts of Clark Griffith to give the Capital a real ball club, as yesterday's big crowd attested.

Than Clark Griffith there is no smarter manager in baseball. His judgment of a player has been put to the test often and although he has occasionally gone wrong, he usually comes across with the right done.

Griff pulled off one of the shrewdest deals in years when he unloaded Boehl-ing and Moeller on the Cleveland club. obtaining in exchange Elmer Smith and Joe Leonard

Leonard and Smith joined the Nationals at a time when the club was floundering at a time when the club was floundering around near the bottom and since this pair arrived Washington has successfully held its own against all invaders, and the team is now in a position to finish well toward the top.

Griffith deserves nothing but the best from every fair-minded baseball fan of the city and as a result of the team's recent fine showing, the "knockers" have been allenced and everybody in the Capi tal who enjoys professional baseball can thank the Old Fex for providing a club able to hold its own against all comers. Better things are in store next season. Griff is building with a thought for the future. He knows where changes are necessary and will make them.
